

Your information

Keeping your information safe

We need to know some things about you. There are laws to make sure your information is kept private.

Those laws say:

- how we can collect information
- how we store information
- who can see your information
- what we do with your information

This brochure explains how we follow those laws, how we respect your privacy, and what you can do to make sure your privacy is respected.

This information is taken from the Privacy and Confidentiality Policy and Procedure. If you wish to read the entire policy, we are happy to provide a copy. Just ask us.

Asking about you

We need your permission to collect information about you, and to share your information. You don't have to give permission.

Your information helps us provide good and safe services. We only ask for information we need, and we will tell you why we need it. That includes photos and videos too.

If you don't understand why we need information, it's OK to ask us.

Keeping it safe

We will protect your information, only use it for the right reasons, and only show it to the right people. The people who work with you need to see your information — it helps them deliver better services.

We will only share your information if:

- you give permission to share it, or
- we are very worried about your safety, or
- the law requires us to share it.

You can see your information too. Just ask us.

Keeping it up to date

YOUR PART

If your information is not correct, we may be unable to do a good job. Give us correct information, and help us keep it up to date.

TELL US WHEN THINGS CHANGE

Remember to tell us

- Moved house?
- New phone number?
- New service provider?
- New contact person?

WHAT WE DO

We check with you

We will also check your information regularly, and update it. You can ask to see your information at any time, and ask us to fix it if something is wrong.

If we didn't respect your privacy

You can talk to us first. If you are still not happy, you can contact the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner, or ask an advocate to help you.
