Your safety

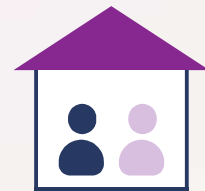

Working together safely

Your safety is very important to us. We work hard to deliver safe services.

Sometimes accidents happen. Sometimes people make mistakes, or treat other people badly. We call these things incidents.

This brochure explains how we try to prevent incidents, and what we do if one happens.

You can help prevent incidents too. Act safely. Treat other people with respect. And if you don't feel safe, tell someone about it.

This information is taken from our Incident Management Policy and Procedure. If you wish to read the entire policy, we are happy to provide a copy. Just ask us.

NDIS providers must follow rules about keeping people safe. We work hard to keep everyone safe — you, our workers, and other people in the community.

RISK MANAGEMENT

We think ahead

We think about how accidents can happen, and how to prevent them. We ask you questions, and we think about the supports we provide, the places where those supports happen, the people who work with you, and other people around you.

If you feel unsafe, tell us

We want everyone to be safe, and to feel safe. If you feel unsafe, you can tell us. We promise to listen.

If something goes wrong

WHAT WE DO

Our staff know what to do if there is a problem or an accident. We follow the NDIS rules if an incident happens.

1 We tell the NDIS Commission.

2 We investigate the incident.

3 We change things, so it doesn't happen again.

4 We talk about all of this with the person who was hurt.

We must follow these rules if someone gets hurt, if someone says they have been hurt, or if staff treat NDIS participants badly.

Making it right again

Everyone has the right to be treated fairly. If you are involved in an incident, you have the right to know what went wrong and what is being done to make it right. We will always keep you informed.

If you don't get answers

You have the right to complain. If you don't feel safe talking with our staff, tell someone else — family, a friend, or an advocate. The NDIS Commission can help too.

If we don't act safely, tell us

You can talk to us first. If you are still not happy, you can contact the NDIS Commission, or ask an advocate to help you.
